SALVATION ARMY MAN INVADES FIGHTING RING

Capt. Dermody Says "Fight, but Don't Forget the Poor," and Sports Shower Money Over the Ropes.

Capt. Dermody, of the Salvation Army, swelled the finances of the organization to-day by $2,000, which had been given to him by the ring at the Longacre Athletic Club while a boxing contest was in progress.

Capt. Dermody before he became a Salvation Army worker was connected with the Greenwood Athletic Club, in Brooklyn. This club used to give exciting exhibitions when the Horton law was in force, and there was no man connected with the club who was more interested in the bouts than Dermody. It was there that Terry McGovern fought his early battles.

About six hundred men were watching the contests at the Longacre Club last night when Dermody and three other men in the Salvation Army uniform entered. Many old-time followers of fighters and many of the boxers recognized in the quiet, dignified Salvation Army man their old Greenwood Athletic Club associate, and they marvelled that he should appear at a boxing match.

Players were represented at the meeting, including every branch of the service, from the wounded who died early to-day of wounds of the heart. He was born in 1849.

MULE'S KICK BROKE JAW OF HOSTLER.

Animal May Have Been Jealous of Piebald Horse Led Through Yard by Roland.

A hurry call for an ambulance went out from Wakefield police station last night, and Dr. Taft, of Fordham, went there post haste. He found George Ronald, a negro, forty years old, who is employed by George Smith, a contractor, nursing a fractured jaw. The injury was the result of a mule's pre-rogative to kick.

George was leading a piebald horse through a yard, where the mule was loosely tethered. When George and the horse came within range, the mule with the precision of a "man behind the gun," lengthened its right hind leg and landed on George's jaw.
